

Robert L. Knepper – Class of 1977

Rob Knepper's love for the theater began with his mother creating props for Maumee Civic Theater. At the age of nine, Rob joined a children's theater company in Maumee and has been hooked ever since. Today, Robert is an accomplished actor who makes his home in Venice, California. He starred as the character T-Bag in the hit FOX network show Prison Break and as Samuel Sullivan in the NBC show Heroes. He appeared in the films Hitman, Hostage and Transporter 3, as well as the made for television movies The Pennsylvania Miner's Story, Carnivale on HBO, and Jackie, Ethel, Joan: The Women of Camelot, playing Robert F. Kennedy. Rob studied drama at Northwestern University and began his professional theater career in Chicago. He moved to New York City, intending a career in theater, but began working in television and film in 1986 with roles in That's Life and The Paper Chase. Rob actively supports the Nancy Davis Foundation for Multiple Sclerosis. The IMDb website credits Rob with 94 acting titles.